

Widow's Blessing

There lived a widow who had nothing. She found herself without food, and her pantry was utterly bare. Yet, each day, she would kneel faithfully, her spirit unbroken, her faith unwavering, and send a sincere prayer to the heavens, "O Lord, bless my pantry. Bless me with an abundance of food."

One day, an unexpected sound echoed at the door, and upon opening, she found herself face to face with an abundance of food she had been fervently praying for. Overwhelmed with joy, she exclaimed, "God did it! God did it! God did it! My word, it's a miracle! A divine intervention! God has answered my prayers!"

As she expressed her gratitude to the Lord, a man suddenly emerged behind the bushes. "Aha!" he exclaimed, "I live next door and don't believe in God. Yesterday, I overheard your prayer for sustenance, so I took it upon myself to visit the local supermarket. I filled bags with groceries, left them on your doorstep, and hid in the foliage, all set to see you praise a God that does not exist!"

She exclaimed with joy and faith, "God did it! God did it! God did it!"

He exclaimed, "No, no, you're missing the point. It wasn't a divine act. It was me. I overheard your prayers from the window. I journeyed to the grocery store and purchased the groceries using my funds. It was my actions that fulfilled your needs, not God's. There is no God."

But she joyfully exclaimed, "God did it! God did it! God did it! And He made the devil pay for it."

Romans 8:28 (KJV): And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.

Romans 8:28 serves as a testament to the faith of the widow. It suggests that every event, regardless of how seemingly disconnected or unrelated it may be, is part of a divine plan orchestrated by God for those who love Him. The atheist neighbor, despite his disbelief, unknowingly became an instrument in the execution of this divine plan. He answered the widow's prayers, illustrating the scripture that all things, even those that are not inherently good or from God, can work together for the good of those who love Him. Despite the neighbor's intention to disprove God's existence, he essentially confirmed it for the widow, strengthening her faith and reaffirming her belief that God indeed "makes all things work together for good."

Consider all the times in your past when you've been through trials and tribulations and look for how God turned those experiences around or when He sent someone to give you help as he did with the widow. Each story is testimony of His enduring love and faithfulness. There is no situation too difficult for Him to turn into a blessing.
